Content Items

Feature: Contents

Editions: Cloud, Corporate, Store

Kensium POS introduces several content management functions, which enable the editing and display of custom public-facing web pages.

Internally, POS uses this to support things like product and location information pages. This type of usage is described formally in other parts of this documentation, with examples including:

- Locations
- Members
- Products

There are several menus and admin pages that enable the definition and editing of custom content types. These menus are intended for Kensium personnel only – they are not documented and subject to change at any time.

> Customization of content types is intended for Kensium personnel only. Client usage of POS to define custom content types is not officially supported by Kensium.
